An intimate exhibition of recent work by acclaimed Southwest artist Page Allen will open on Friday, February 1st at Owings-Dewey Fine Art. As usual, Allen's work will lead the viewer on a journey, but rather than focusing on the abstract ephemeral as has been her style—in this exhibition Allen has chosen a different focus, a different journey.

She states:

I am surprised to find these things in my studio—a blue boat, a seal, a pink shell, a glacier. These paintings are made within life, not straining to see beyond the edges, seeing though the here and now, from close at hand. If I paint them faithfully, I find something distant and present, without shortcuts.

This exhibition will provide the viewing public with the bold colors and rhythmic brushstrokes that have come to expect from Page Allen. However, the change in subject matter, scenery and the scale all evident in the exhibition, offer the public a chance to view a fascinating development in the career of this acclaimed Southwest artist.
